[Varsity portfolio company OCP] announced that Tim Corvino, MD was named as the Company's Chief Executive Officer. Dr. Corvino is the former CEO of Spire Orthopedic Partners. He also previously served as Chief Operating Officer of Covenant Physician Partners and, prior thereto, as Chief Operating Officer of U.S. Acute Care Solutions. . . . [T]he Company [also] announced a growth recapitalization transaction, inclusive of a $185M hybrid capital raise provided by Brookfield Asset Management through its Special Investments program ("BSI") and a $358M senior credit facility refinancing, led by TPG Twin Brook Capital Partners ("TPG Twin Brook"). BSI's hybrid capital investment brings strategic partnership and adds additional flexibility to OCP's capital structure, positioning the Company for its next phase of growth. OCP's successful debt refinancing extends and reprices the Company's existing credit facility to a lower rate, while providing OCP with an expanded revolving credit facility and delayed draw term loan to support OCP's future growth.

Sector Insights

Activity around year-end and JPM - including Optum's acquisition of OrthoAlliance from Revelstoke and Varsity's recap of OCP - has begun to revive optimism and activity amongst existing lower-middle-market platforms getting long in their respective hold periods. While the market for assets of scale ($50m+ EBITDA) has meaningfully cooled off - evidenced by initial outcomes in the USOP and OA processes - smaller assets with continued room to grow expect to be prized targets for sponsors who continue to be interested in spending time in the category. While this has become a contrarian play in the eyes of the market at-large that has increasingly shifted its focus in multi-site provider services to more consumer-oriented specialties, there remains a stable of investors with appetite to build platforms after allowing the effective initial round of these investments to play itself out. Physician-shareholder sentiment as equity value and income repair materialize will be key to successful outcomes as "second bite" opportunities begin to be discussed and explored.
